Step 2: Scan Record

Patrons will either present:

A printed record with a QR code
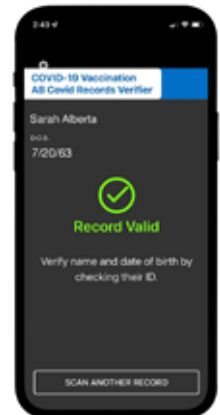

Or the QR code on their phones

Scanning tips

- Scanning from phone: Have patron turn up brightness on their phone and zoom into the QR code.
- Scanning from paper: Record might not scan if damaged, folded across the QR code, or if printed in small scale or low quality. Manually verify information on the printed portion of record, or ask patron to download new record from alberta.ca/CovidRecords
- Scanning multiple records: Click "scan next" before going to the next person.
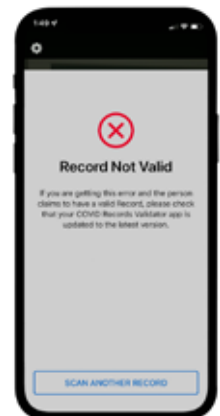

What you'll see after scanning

Record valid message
- Patrons' vaccine record meets all requirements. Move to Step 3-Check name and birthdate against their ID to verify identity.

Record not valid message
- The patron may not yet meet the vaccination requirements.
- The patron can show the paper record received at their appointment or printable card without QR code until November 15. Operators must verify by looking at the dates printed on the record, or by scanning the QR code by using the verification app, that the second dose was given at least 14 days prior. Or that the patron received one dose of Janssen vaccine (outside of Canada)14 days earlier.
- If the patron feels there is a mistake, they can try downloading a new record from alberta.ca/CovidRecords.
- A patron must be denied entry if they are not able to show proof of vaccination, a negative COVID-19 test taken within the previous 72 hours, or a medical exemption.

Examples of accepted personal identification include (photo ID not required):

- birth certificate
- citizenship card
- driver's licence
- government issued identification card
- health care card
- Métis card, Treaty card or Inuit status card
- passport

If the patrons' name or birthdate are incorrect, they must correct it using the steps listed on alberta.ca/CovidRecordsHelp
