The Alberta Aids to Daily Living (AADL) program assists Albertans with a long-term disability, chronic illness or terminal illness in maintaining independence in their community through the provision of basic medical equipment and supplies to meet their clinically assessed needs.
Who is eligible?

To be eligible for AADL benefits, an individual must:

- Require benefits due to a long-term disability (six months or longer) or terminal illness;
- Be an Alberta resident with a valid Alberta Personal Health Care Number;
- Be assessed by a healthcare professional (e.g., nurse, occupational therapist, audiologist, respiratory therapist) who is also an AADL approved Authorizer or Specialty Assessor;
- Meet specific eligibility criteria for the recommended benefit.

Refer to the AADL Program Manuals for additional information.

Who is not eligible?

Albertans may not be eligible for AADL benefits if they are eligible to receive comparable benefits through another source, including:

- Workers’ Compensation Board;
- Private insurance plan;
- Veterans Affairs;
- Non-Insured Health Benefits for First Nations and Inuit.

How can Albertans access AADL benefits?

Albertans must first be assessed by an AADL approved Authorizer or Specialty Assessor to determine basic medical needs and eligibility for the program.

To contact an Authorizer, call your local Alberta Health Services office at:
Health Link Alberta at 1-866-408-LINK (5465).

Specialty Assessors assess for the following benefits:

- Oxygen and/or respiratory equipment
- Orthotic braces
- Limb prostheses
- Ocular prostheses
- Breast prostheses
- Hearing aids

Specialty Assessors are employed by Specialty Suppliers. To contact a Specialty Supplier, call AADL or visit the AADL website.

Where do clients get equipment or supplies?

Once assessed by an AADL Authorizer, clients will be provided with a list of up to three AADL approved vendors from which to obtain medical equipment or supplies.

If clients are assessed by a Specialty Supplier, they will supply the benefit.
