Dollar, commodity prices decline sharply as debt fears spread...

Concerns over European sovereign debt have washed across the world this week. Investor concerns have battered global equity markets, reduced prices for commodities and devalued the Euro as investors have anxiously reduced their exposure to European events. The decline in oil prices has been dramatic, with the price of WTI dropping from US$75.11/bbl at the close on May 7th to US$68.01/bbl yesterday. While the Canadian dollar has gained 1.2% against the Euro since the end of April, the drop of commodity prices combined with the flight of investors to US dollars and US dollar denominated assets, which are viewed as a safe haven during times of heightened uncertainty, has knocked more than two cents off the Canadian dollar-US dollar exchange rate in the last week.
